In 20 years, we've welcomed over 4 million visitors, making the Jewish Children's Museum a place where learning, creativity, and imagination come together with a greater mission—teaching and educating youth about the Jewish people. As the only museum of its kind in the world, visitors and children from all walks of life and all ethnicities have experienced Jewish identity rooted in traditions, culture, and history on our tours.

The museum was born from tragedy—the murder of 16-year-old Ari Halberstam by a terrorist on the Brooklyn Bridge in 1994. Early education is essential to combating antisemitism and prejudice, shaping and empowering the leaders of the future with an understanding and acceptance of others.

As we reflect on two decades of impact, we're in the midst of a campaign to raise funds for expanding our efforts to deepen the conversation around Jewish history, resilience, and global contributions while addressing the painful pattern of antisemitism.

Join us as we celebrate this 20-year milestone, and together, let's continue to inspire, educate, and build a brighter future for the generations to come.
